WHY LADY WARWICK ABANDONED HER TOUR

for Her Return From

merous relatives and who more than any other member of the british aristocracy seems to appreciate the true meaning of the words nobless coblege, who is responsible for the abandonment by his half-sister. Lady Warwick, of her ridiculous tour in America with her lecture, the material of which was to consist partly of Socialist ranting, for which there is no market here, and the remainder was to be composed of her reminiscences.

That is really the secret of Lady Warwick's sudden return to England and it reflects much honor on the Duke of Sutherland.

Duke of Sutherland.

In view of the fact that the ceremonles connected with the canonization of the Maid of Orleans will be brought to a close towards the end of the year, all other procedure in the affair having been finally completed, and that Joan of Arc will then be the full-fledzed national saint of France, it is worth while calling attention to the sensation created abroad by the story of the Comtesse d'oilliamson, of the discovery in the library of her uncle, the Comte de Maleyssie, of some four or five autograph letters of Joan of Arc. The comte claims to be a collateral descendant of the warrior maid, and the library referred to is in his very ancient castle of Beuvriere.

rior maid, and the library referred to is in his very ancient castle of Benviller.

The Maid of Orleans left no descend ants; for there is no truth whatsoever in the story of her escape to Metz with the assistance of her orothers, of her marriage, and of her death not having actually taken place in 1431 at Rouen.

It is evident that the peculiar arrangements made by the Fren is crown in the officenth century for honoring her family, are in a measure responsible for the fairy tale of her marriage. Already two years prior to her being burned at the stake, namely in 1423, King Charles VII. bestowed patents of hereditary nobility upon the father and mother of Joan, and upon her brothers, the patents expressly stipulating that the nobility accorded in reward for her services should descend in the female as well as in the male line of the posterity of her brothers.

This was a terrible tall order. For is meant that every one who was ablated trace his descent in any way from Jacques d'Arc, and from his wife, isa-belle Remee, parents of the Maid of Orleans, was entitled to the rank and prerogatives of a French noble.

So great was the crowd of pretended descendants of her parents, a hundred years later, that King Henry II. issued a decree restricting the nobles chaiming descent from Joan of Arc's parents, to those who were "living in knightly fashion" and "who had means adequate to support their rank."

In 1614 King Louis XIII. issued a still further decree, amounteding that no further application for a patent of nobility, based on descent, either in the male or in the female ling, from Joan Petersburg, Va., April 16. The annual meeting of the Baptist Sunday School Association of Peters burg and vicinity was held Sunday afternoon with the West End Baptist Church. A delightful musical program was rendered by the Sunda; School of that shurch. The Rev. Charles R. The matter of taking a religious census of all the denominations in the census of all the denominations in the city was discussed, and the association unantinously agreed to co-operate with all Protestant demoninations in taking a religious census of Petersburg. To Repair Damages.

A party of engineers, from the United States Corps in Norfolk, arrived in the city this morning, and were engaged during the day in making examination as to the damages done here by the recent flood, and as to the present condition of the harbor. As has been stated, the big stone dam constructed by the government was badly broken and washed, and sandbars which that dam was designed to prevent were formed in the harbor and river. The government will probably repair these damages.

Brief Notes.

Fire occurred Sunday evening in a dwelling on Federal Street, occupied by a colored family. The building was saved from damage, but bedding and furniture were injured.

In St. Joseph's Catholic Church Wednesday morning, Miss Minnie Blazek and Albert Brizek, a young Bohemian couple of Prince George county, will be married.

from completely rulning every vestige left of her social position, not by her socialistic writings, but by her retailing the chroniques scandaleuses of the British nobility, and incidentally of her own family and relatives, on an American lecture platform.

It is well known that her lecture managers, not satisfied with the results of her first lecture, demanded that there should be more scandal and more "ginger." But in the first place, had she followed these suggestions she would have exposed both herself and husband to all sorts of legal proceedings for slander and for fidel on her return to England, and would also have condemned herself to a social demise more complete even than that of the ex-lady Cardigan. It was at this moment that the Duke of Sutherland appealed to his half-brother-inlaw, the Earl of Warwick, calling his attention to all the frightful scandal that would onsue if Lady Warwick were to carry out her program, oftered to provide each of them with a hande me and very liberal allowance if the would slop the lecturing tour and every most at once to England, and expressed his readiness to contribute something more to the restoration and Since this decree of Louis VIII., nearly 300 years ago, there has been an extraordinary decline in the number of bona fide descendants of Joan of Arc's parents—a decline to which the extinction through massacre, emigration and ruln of so many families at the time of the great revolution of 1792, has no doubt contributed. In fact, to-day there are barely twenty families left that can show a perfectly authentic descent, and those only in the female line, from the parents of the Maid of Orleans, among them the Melcions d'Arc, who are as such entitled to hear the arms granted to her by King Charles VII., nearly 500 years ago.

The arms show, on a blue shield, a perpendicular sword of sliver, pointed upward. The point supports the gold crown of France, and the hilt of the sword is also of gold.
